

A woman with dark curly hair, wearing a striped shirt, stands in the center of a data center, gesturing with both hands as if presenting. She is facing a group of people whose backs are to the camera. They are seated at desks with multiple computer monitors. The monitors display various data visualizations, including world maps with network connections, bar charts, and complex network diagrams. The background is filled with server racks and more large screens showing global network maps. The overall atmosphere is high-tech and professional.
